

Nicholas Guida

Nicholas Guida, born in Italy in 1980, is a music lover since he was in the youngest ages. At 8 his parents bought him his first guitar and at 14 he started playing in many various groups and styles. He played for years in a solo one man band, opening for artists such as Kent DuChaine and Corey Harris. He graduated from University in Rome in 2004 in Italian and History and since that he began his career in writing and publishing, continuing at the same time his personal musical projects writing and recording songs. His bluesy original style has been influenced by two of the greatest guitarists of all the times, Ali Farka Toure and Habib Koite. I Run To Your Heart has been released in February 2009 as music video created by Canadian Brian Mota (myspace.com/undercook). War and Comets became the soundtrack for the promo of the iPhone's game iGun.
